

Customer Satisfaction Research

Tracking company performance against your customers' expectations

The tool we use here is talk – Strategy International knows that by speaking directly with your customers as a third party, there can be honest dialogue on just how satisfied they really are. Through our Customer Satisfaction Research, we provide a tool to let you see your customer's thoughts on how you're executing against your competitors. Our unique system also tracks what is most important to your customers, so that you can see in which areas your performance is having the biggest impact.

The scope of our study sets it apart. Always tailor-made, we can interview your customers on their satisfaction for over thirty different performance attributes in areas such as product quality and reliability, delivery, pricing, sales professionals, customer service, operations issues and more. Our study can be set up as an ongoing evaluation, recording over time exactly how your business practices are affecting your customer's satisfaction. And in today's highly competitive environment, staying in tune with your customers has become the only way to lead.

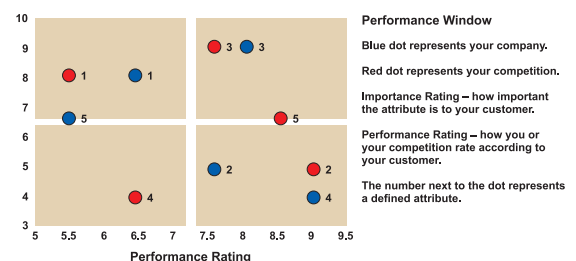

Your company will benefit by:

- > Gaining intimate knowledge of product or service problems
- > Encouraging employee motivation to make improvements
- > Detecting early warning signs of potential customer defection
- > Providing confirmation of process improvement
- > Supplying market trend information
- > Providing instant understanding of issues through direct verbatim comments
- > Discerning the Apostles and Defectors within your customer base
- > Comparing your organization's performance scores against the competitors

Strategy International is careful to interview key employees and management within your organization to determine their goals for the research as well as particular areas of customer satisfaction they would like Strategy International to probe.

Strategy International's proven two-tier customer-centric methodology allows data gathering and reporting to be quickly and accurately completed. We treat the organization's customers like they were our own. Interview questionnaires are developed in collaboration with some of your key employees and customers. Our interviewers are skilled at probing and capturing in-depth verbatim customer comments. The scores are used to establish benchmarks to affect new or changed customer service improvement programs.

The final report can demographically break down the results along multiple lines, such as customer account size or facility location, so you can better pinpoint exactly who is pleased or discontent. Numerous easy-to-read graphs, including our "Performance Windows," clearly illustrate which areas your customers take most seriously and how you are performing in them. Furthermore, Strategy International prides itself on not only delivering the data, but on developing tactics and solutions to implement the changes your customer's may be calling for.
